The Importance of Free-Choice Mineral

For those in the beef industry, spring brings green pastures, growing grass, decreased hay consumption and feeding frequency. Protein and energy may be provided by high quality pasture but we still need to consider the mineral and vitamin requirements of our livestock. Free-choice mineral is a good way to ensure that the requirements of your animals are being met. Producers offers several different formulations that come in loose, block and tub forms to meet your operations specific needs. Call our on staff nutritionist, Robert Barrett, for more information at 979-778-2864.

Producers Mineral Contracting Program is now available for a limited time. By contracting mineral, ranchers have the opportunity to lock in pricing for the season. Be sure to lock in your savings by Saturday, March 27th, 2021.

Webinar: Toxic Plants in Grasslands and the Impact on Livestock

Thursday, April 1st, 2021

12p.m.-1p.m.

Dr. Cat Barr, Diagnostic Toxicologist

Texas A&M Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory, College Station

Grasslands are critical infrastructure for most cow/calf operations. The quality and abundance of pasture grasses directly influence livestock rate of gain, thereby affecting livestock margins and production costs, which determine the profitability of a stocker operation. The successful cattleman controls weeds not only to preserve healthy pasture but also to prevent plant poisonings that may reduce individual animal performance or even cause fatalities.
